

Developments Take Place.

This followed an attempt on the part of Sakatani to cut the appropriations of the army and navy and failing in this of the department of railroads.

Sakatani was responsible for the annual budget and as this budget is larger than was expected other more taxation at home or a foreign loan will be necessary to meet the requirements.

Marquis Saitonji, the responsible head of the cabinet, and the other members of the cabinet who agreed with him, finally decided on the following program:

Marquis Saitonji's resignation first would be offered. If the Emperor declined to accept it, then the resignations of Sakatani and Yamagata would be offered. Matsuno and Iwano consenting to combine their portfolios in the pursuance of the agreement.

Premier Saitonji and Prince Ho waited on the Emperor in the afternoon. The Emperor refused to accept the resignation of Saitonji, but accepted the resignations of Sakatani and Yamagata.

were shattered, a section of the roof blown out, and a crack in the wall wide opened in the east wall of John E. Reddy's residence by the terrible explosion of a gasoline stove at half past nine o'clock this morning. Mrs. Reddy, after peeing some from the stove, had fortunately gone across the road to care for her invalid mother, so there was no living person in the house when the terrible thing happened. The detonation was heard a block away and splinters of glass were hurled a distance of 10 feet. Only the prompt arrival of the fire department, W. A. Neighbour, of River, with assistance of the firemen of a town with a rug and applications of flour, saved the property from complete destruction. As it was, the interior was badly damaged by smoke. The loss cannot at this time be estimated, just what caused the explosion is not known.

Now York, Jan. 15.—Another murder in West Chester county is troubling the authorities. The body of Frank Mummio, a wealthy young banker, was found beside his wagon in a lonely road near Ardsley. He had been stabbed in the neck, evidently after a fierce struggle. A large amount of money and his watch and

MUNICIPAL AID TO THE IMPERIAL BAND

That Was the Topic Discussed at Annual Banquet and Smoker Last Evening—Aldermen Guests of Honor.

With members of the city council
as the guests of honor, Municipal Union No. 228 enjoyed its annual banquet and smoker last evening. Mayor
S. B. Heddlow and several of the city fathers were unable, on account of previous engagements, to accept the invitation but Aldermen J. J. Dullin, George Buchholz, W. C. Reichold, J. W.
Clark, and W. H. Merritt graced the feast with their presence. Turkey and other tempting viands, including ice cream and cake, were served at 8:30 and the party indulged in a song was opened by George L. Hatch with a review of the Imperial band's history from the day of its organization down to the present time. The struggle had been a hard one and it seemed to the speaker that some method other than pushing the band ought to be devised for the support of the public concerts and that if these concerts were worth while, accommodations
other than the temporary bandstand which the organization had to have placed in position at its own expense, should be provided. He cited the instances of La Crosse which appropriates $2,000 annually for its band as an illustration of what some of the neighboring cities are doing.

Ald. Dullin expressed himself as heartily in favor of appropriations by the city both for the support of the band and the erection of a suitable bandstand, if these things could be done under the city charter. And if they could not be done, then the people had another example of the criminal and deplorable limitations imposed by that instrument. The city had a band it ought to be proud of,
and none better existed in this section of the state. Ald. Heddlow expressed sympathy of the same character.
Likewise, Ald. Clark, who thought that there could be no question regarding the city's powers so far as a bandstand was concerned when the city attorney had ruled that it could build a bandstand in the court-house park. Ald. Buchholz was unable to state what the limitations were, but believed that the continuance of the concerts was desired not only by the pleasure-seeking public at large but also by the merchants and was in favor of doing all that could be done.
Ald. Merritt said that he would be in favor of building a suitable bandstand in the park even if it cost $1,000.

Leader A. K. Knoff said that a twenty-foot bandstand would be large enough and that the structure should be circular in form with a top which should not be a sounding-board. He thought that it might be located with advantage between the fountain and the monument. Prof. W. T. Thiele expressed the opinion that the city's absolute charter had outlived its usefulness in many respects and that if the concerts were discontinued, it would be in direct opposition to the will of the people. He offered a motion that a committee be appointed by the band to take up those matters with the common council and the motion was passed. The committee was not named last evening but will be appointed within the next few days.

Several hours were devoted to card-playing and the evening proved a very interesting and enjoyable one for all present.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Beloit, Wis., Jan. 15.—Ashel Smythe, a farmer residing several miles west of Beloit, was seriously hurt in a runaway accident caused by the driving way of a white tree which fell against the foot of his team and frightened the animals. The wagon turned over and he was pinned beneath. When rescued he was unconscious and had sustained a number of bad bruises. One of his horses suffered a broken leg and had to be shot.

The farmers of Shoshone have organized to hold a farmers' institute there this winter.

Deputy Sheriff Lynch has secured warrants from the Beloit municipal court for the arrest of Ed. Wolek and have caused a disturbance at a Modern Woodman dance in the town of Avon.

Captain Hosman of Company L, W.

that there will be no inspection of the state militia this year by officers of

DEFENDANTS WON IN LAWSUIT OVER WELL

Jury of Six Returned Verdict For Campbell Brothers in Action
Brought by Benjamin Bressdine.
Last evening a jury of six, examining the action of Benjamin Bressdine vs. George and William Campbell in Justice Stanley D. Tallman's court returned a verdict for the defendants.
The litigation was concerned with a well which Mr. Bressdine dug for the Campbell brothers, who reside in the town of Rock, ten years ago. The litter was to have paid $500 on its completion if found satisfactory, according to the alleged agreement, but after parting with the funds to pay the balance on the ground that the well was not satisfactory and unfit for use.
Atty. Gen. Reader for the plaintiff, and former Circuit Judge H. P. Dunwiddie, for the defendant, contested
the case for two days before a jury composed of Alex. MacGregor, Thomas Edlin, Nicholas Dizer, Thomas Hoff-erman, E. E. Edgington, and David Clark. At the direction of Judge Tallman the jurors were treated to a long, cold ride with Officer William Dullin to the Campbell farm where a careful inspection of the well was made.

the talented actress and her husband.
Liabilities of the husband are schedulgin until half past eight, owing to the lateness of the arrival of most of those present, but was thoroughly en-

the out-of-town guests who were pre-

FORMER EVANSVILLE
MAN DIES IN IOWA

L. T. Pullen, Former Banker and Manufacturer of Evansville, Dies
at Des Moines.

Evansville, Jan. 15.—L. T. Pullen, founder and president of the Bank of Evansville and an early Wisconsin settler, died yesterday morning at 8 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Antea of Des Moines. Mr.
Pullen has been well known in manufacturing and political circles for many years. He was the father of Charles P. Pullen, cashier of the German-American bank of Milwaukee, and George L. Pullen, cashier of the Bank of Evansville. For more than fifty years he was a resident of the state. He went to the home of his daughter three years ago.

Mr. Pullen was 83 years of age. He had been failing in health for the past year, perceptibly so for the last six months. He was confined to his bed for eight weeks. A telegram announcing his death was received yesterday by his son, which said that the death came peacefully.

The two sons will leave this morning for Des Moines, Ia., to attend the funeral. The body will be placed in a vault in a cemetery in Des Moines until spring, when it will be removed to Evansville and buried in the family lot in that place.

Mr. Pullen was born in Anson, Somerset county, Me., on May 1, 1825. His early training and education was strictly of the old Puritanical order.
He was an adept student, and at the age of 20 years he taught school in Kingfield, Me., to which place his parents moved when he was 7 years of age.

During of advantages that lay in the western part of the country, Mr.
Pullen moved westward and settled in La Fayette county in 1851. Mr.
Pullen engaged in the business of manufacturing wagons, buggies and carriages of various kinds. In 1857
he formed a partnership with Thomas Patterson in the town of Argyle, and the business was conducted on an elaborate scale.

The business of the company became one of large proportions, and in 1859 it was decided to branch out and engage in the manufacture of plows and other implements. The business of the firm grew to such an extent that it was found necessary to obtain water power in order to increase the facilities of the company, and for this reason the shops of the company were moved to Monroe.

Mr. Pullen moved to Evansville and later sold his interests in the business. In 1870 he organized and successfully launched the First National Bank of Evansville. As president of the bank since it was organized, which was thirty-eight years ago, the institution became one of the best known in Rock county, and it is today one of the leading banks in this part of Wisconsin. Although Mr.
Pullen went to Des Moines three years ago, he still retained the presidency of the bank.

Mr. Pullen served as mayor of Evansville for a number of years and he also was elected for several terms
from Rock county for several years.
He was one of the leaders among the republicans in the assembly and was closely associated to ex-Gov. Alexander W. Randall. During his first term as assemblyman he had the county seat of La Fayette county removed from Shilbille to Darlington, and during his last term from Rock county he was active in railroad legislation with David Vance and Henry Clark, both of Milwaukee, who were then in the legislature. Mr. Pullen never aspired to any office higher than assemblyman.

Mr. Pullen was married to Catharine H. Pike in Kingfield, Me., on Aug.
5, 1849. Mrs. Pullen was born in Kingfield on Sept. 1, 1829, and is still in robust health. Besides his wife, Mr. Pullen is survived by his two sons and the daughter who resides in Des Moines.

Mr. Pullen was modest and reserved and never made known his numerous benefactions to Lawrence university and to Evansville seminary.
When it was a Methodist institution, he was its Methodist minister, and work. He was not a member of any secret societies. Mr. Pullen was beloved by every resident of Evansville.

Last August, Mr. and Mrs. Pullen celebrated the fifty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, and the event was a memorable occasion in Evansville. Nearly all of the residents participated.

MRS. FLORENCE W. JACQUES.

The demands of society, which she formerly satisfied, have been deserted by Mrs. Florence W. Jacques, wife of a prominent Ottumwa (Ia.) attorney, and her entire time is now given over to the enforcement of the Iowa State Humane society laws. Mrs. Jacques has been appointed a regular member of the Ottumwa police department by Mayor Thomas J. Phillips, and she has all the powers of the male officer.
Her sense of duty, however, is devoted to "ferreting" out teamsters and others who are cruel to dumb animals, and her strict enforcement of the state's statutes in this connection have won her the admiration of all town. Mrs. Jacques, who is a large woman, is daring, and never fails to carry her point when suppressing upon a rough handler of horse flesh the humane law.
Until she was adorned with a star
and allowed to patrol the whole city of Ottumwa, Mrs. Jacques was prominent in the foremost society set, but society to her now has been replaced with the performance of her duties of the second woman police officers in Iowa.

Young Editors.

In the United States to-day are 16
juvenile magazines edited and managed by girls less than 16 years old, and about 90 weekly newspapers run by boys. All of them appear to be doing well. In most cases the editor acts all the type and does his own handling for advertising. Some of the best weekly newspapers in the country to-day were first started by boys.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. Not a remedy that will attack the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn boy growth back to flesh again. That is impossible.
I can now easily kill the pain and purge
this deplorable disease.
In Germany—a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—found the last ingredient with a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many cases of Rheumatism but now, at last, I successfully cure all curable cases of this horrible much dreaded disease. These cases like greater wounds, which bleed and burn, and which disfigure and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water.
and which, when dissolved, these poisonous wounds pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real cure—no actual excuse to suffer longer with out help. We sell, and in confidence recommend.

NOT HEREDITARY

Baldness Due to a Living Minute
Germ.
Many people, even unto the present day of grace, consider baldness due to hereditary influence.
Nothing is further from the truth—
baldness is caused by the onslaught of a minute organism which secretes itself beneath the scalp and attacks the roots of the hair—causing it to lose its life and fall out.
This organism cannot be got rid of except by the free and persevering
use of Newbro's Hairbalm.
No matter how badly the scalp is affected the hair will surely disappear and hair health is restored
when Hairbalm is applied.
"Destroy the cause you remove the testimonials. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Hairbalm Co., Detroit, Mich.

MORE REGULATION

Congress passed a nine-hour work-day law for railway telegraph operators, which goes into effect the 1st of March next. Wisconsin possesses an amendment not to be outdone, and so goes the government one better by passing an eight-hour law, which became effective the first of the year. Shifts have already been commenced against the Great Northern Railway company, and plans are pending to commence similar action against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul for violation. These are test cases, which will be settled in the supreme court if necessary, as the constitutionality of the law is questioned.

The object of this measure, so far as Congress is concerned, was to avoid accidents due to overwork, and loss of sleep. Wisconsin offered no definite object, but simply proposed to keep in advance of the reform progression.

The railroads offered strenuous objections, claiming that it would necessitate employing three men to perform the work which had long been performed satisfactorily, and without complaint, by two, and that the law would accomplish nothing in the way of preventing accidents, for while operators sometimes made mistakes, loss of sleep was not the cause.

But those protests were like "barling up the wind"; regulation was the watchword, all along the line, and so the companies have been making the best of the situation by preparing to comply with the law.

The average railway operator is station agent, and while required to be on duty, on either day or night agent, 12 hours, his work at the key-board is neither confining nor tiresome. He may report trains in and out, a dozen times, during the day, but unless something unusual happens this is about the extent of his telegraph work.

Under the new law, the man who acts as operator, is not permitted to be on duty more than 8 hours, and so the companies have been obliged to install telephone service, at many of their smaller stations, as they could not afford to employ three shifts of telegraph operators.

The law is as senseless as the 8-hour law which applies to government employees. H. W. King, formerly of Janesville, now division superintendent in Brooklyn, has under him some 25 or 30 mail carriers. If for any reason one of these men is unable to make his route on time, and could complete it in half an hour, he is not permitted to do it, but must return the undelivered mail to the office.

If he complete his work, and reports half an hour late, he is subject to fine or reprimand, for doing what any other employer would commend him for doing. This is civil service with an 8-hour attachment.

The long continued era of prosperity developed a lot of fads, and the 8-hour day is one of them. It was demanded by organized labor, and adopted by the government in response to this demand, and in spite of the fact that 90 per cent of American labor is of the open-shop class, free to work as many hours as occasion demands.

These restrictive laws, in time of depression, stand out with glaring inconsistency. When many of the industries are running on short time, and two men are waiting for every job, the question of hours is lost in the demand for work.

MINING TRADE SCHOOL

"The Mining Trade school at Platteville, Wis., was founded by the state legislature of 1907 to meet the need for secondary mining education. The new school will use the great stone building formerly used by the state normal school (after it has been refitted with the necessary machinery and equipment for teaching mining) and will open its doors on January 27, 1908. While offering every inducement to the older working miner to take advantage of its educational opportunities, it is realized that a great institution can only be developed by having a course suitable for youth in their teens.

"For this reason, its minimum age limit is placed at 15½ years and the course is only two years long. Its entrance requirements are an eighth grade graduation, a country school diploma or their equivalents in arithmetic, and the use of the English language. In order to render the course possible for the limited resources of many of the youths, who would wish to take it, plans have been made to keep the expenses for the laboratory materials and books very low. As tuition is free, and, by a co-operative arrangement, the cost of board and lodging need be only $3 a week, the necessary expense of a school year will be only $170.

"As mining is not only an art, but a science, a mere course of handicraft as given in the trade schools for carpenters or machinists would be insufficient training for mine foremen. Scientific theory must therefore be taught, but how much? Shall it be the endeavor to graduate mathematical engineers? A consideration of the entrance requirements and of the length of the course would show the futility of such an attempt. What then can be done?

"It has been the privilege of the writer, during an experience of many years in practical mining work, to be associated at various times with successful 'practical' engineers. In positions of great responsibility, such men often exhibited a mastery of the application of science to the problems of their work, that many a college-bred engineer never attains. The school training of some of these men had been limited to the three R's; then how account for their effectiveness in applied science? They were self-educated men, the reader replies, but if so, what was the nature of their self-training?

"These questions are easier to ask than to answer. 'They have learned by doing' is inadequate. I would rather say, 'They have learned by observing the why and wherefore of what they did.' The marked traits of these practical engineers were curiosity, clear-sightedness and ingenuity. The first trait impelled them to a lively interest in all phenomena, the second enabled them to obtain the data for a given problem accurately and the third quality furnished the originality to devise a solution. Such self-trained men were, until recently, almost our only industrial leaders and they may be said to be the product of a natural selection from thousands of their fellows. In spite of their great achievements, they have all been handicapped by their inefficient schooling. This ignorance has necessarily caused much error and waste, and in the case of an occupation like mining, loss of life. Nevertheless they have proven that a formal scholastic training is not indispensable to engineering success.

"It will be the aim of the Wisconsin Mining Trade school to cultivate those qualities of mind which have made the practical engineers successful and at the same time instruct him in enough mathematics and science, so that he can avoid the pitfalls, lurking in even ordinary engineering problems. The attempt will be made, not to develop consulting engineers, but rather the executive mind of action in a scientific occupation. Engineering is becoming nowadays so specialized that large mining companies consult separate specialists for their problems in the chemical, electrical, mechanical, civil or geological engineering lines. Thus the mining college graduate is apt to find that he cannot compete with the specialists for such work and that he could have got along as well in general mining work if he had quit school several years earlier.

"This information is contained in a letter sent out by R. B. Richmond, E. M., of the Platteville school, and will interest parents as well as young men who are interested in mining engineering, as a profession.

"It is a practical school, because it takes boys from the grades, where most of them graduate, and puts them on their feet before they are 20, equipped with expert knowledge and prepared for positions of trust and responsibility.

"The legislature is to be congratulated for the wisdom displayed in providing this school, which will be successful from the date of opening. The supply of mining engineers has never equalled the demand, and no better field of opportunity presents itself to young men today. Correspond with Prof. Richmond for full particulars concerning the school.

"Foraker scored a point against Taft in Ohio by adding in the defeat of four postoffice candidates, recommended by Taft. The senate said by their action, that presidential interference would not be tolerated in the campaign, but the senate has less than 100 votes, and it seldom becomes enthusiastic over the candidacy of any man for high office.

"More discussion of the sidewalk question will be profitable. It is a good time to express opinion, for while the Rev. Hicks' storms are sometimes 10 days behind scheduled time, it is always safe to predict snow in winter, and obstructed walks that need attention. The Gazette invites communications on this question.

Outdone by a Mule.

An amusing story of the capture of a thief through the instrumentality of a mule is reported from Jersey City. While the thief was badly wringing chickens' necks, the animal started kicking furiously at the chicken house, and before the thief could escape had brought down the roof and walls upon him, entangled in the wire, and half-strangled by bricks and wood, the man fell in easy capture to the inmates, who had rushed out on hearing the noise.

TWILIGHT CLUB AND THE DRAMA

HEATED CONTROVERSY ON MORALITY OF STAGE FAILED TO DEVELOP.

H. C. BUELL'S SPLENDID TALK

On "Shakespeare" and Things Which "Shakespeare Club" Members Didn't Say Were Features of Meeting.

Subject for the February meeting—"Japan." Leader—Rev. John McElroy.

There was the usual large attendance at the Twilight Club's January supper at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last evening. Just before the discussion of "The Drama" was opened H. C. Buell, chairman of the committee appointed at the last session to take action with regard to a projected Shakespeare Association, reported that a constitution had been framed and that within ten days a meeting would be called to pass upon it.

As leader in the consideration of things theatrical from several different viewpoints, Charles Hemmingsway not only introduced each regular speaker with some general allusion to his possible qualifications as a disinterested exponent of his particular topic, but also strove to probe into service many of the listeners, from whom, for one reason or another, helpful suggestions were to be expected. This led to a brief confession by Samuel Smith and F. W. Ward, members of the Shakespeare club, that while the ostensible object of the organization was to study the great dramatist's works, the real object was to get together and enjoy a "good" and a "smoke," all of which seemed a verification of the leader's insinuation that the Shakespeare club existed only to differentiate itself from the common herd, and likewise an explanation of his hard-thrust paradox that people had never before been so busy as during the past few weeks when he was attempting to get someone to talk on the various topics which so wished to assign. But Judge McElroy saved the reputation of the "Shakespeareans" by offering some very thoughtful comments on the works of the bard of Avon. Leader Hemmingsway was unsuccessful in his efforts to promote an impromptu controversy, the members of known radical hostility to the stage and all its works having taken their departure before the discussion opened.

Supr. H. C. Buell of the Janesville schools gave one of the most comprehensive and entertaining expositions of Shakespeare and his works ever delivered in this city. While he spoke but twenty minutes, perhaps, his address betrayed a clearness, understanding and depth of penetration seldom equaled in treatments of twice the length. The outline of the almost universal knowledge of history, psychology, languages, and customs possessed by a master-dramatist who, according to all accounts, had few if any of the advantages of education; his marvellous delineations of historical characters which have become more real to us through his plays than the actual ones of history; his understanding of the mental processes of the ignorant and illiterate; his gift of prophecy; his typical linguistic forms; and his vocabulary of 15,000 words—three times the number used by Milton—all of these phases of the genius character and his works were briefly dealt upon and each individual phase illustrated with an illuminating excerpt from one of the plays.

The speaker also paid his respects to the late Janesville Donnelly's cryptogram and told how Prof. Freeman, using the same cipher by which Donnelly had demonstrated that Bacon wrote the plays, had spelled out the U. of W. college yell and the prophecy that Cleveland was to be elected president.

Rev. W. P. Christy, while recognizing the fact that acting is one of the highest forms of art, gave in his discussion of the question, "What Should be the Attitude of the Churches toward the Drama?" a thorough treatment of the immortal trend in Europe, almost from the beginning of the drama, of the play producers, actors, and patrons. The church, he said, could not maintain an attitude of indifference toward the theatre, as it is one of the most potent influences which mould the public mind and sentiment in matters both of fiction and fact. The character of the drama like the character of the individual requires constant watching. The speaker left the impression that he considered the majority of theatrical productions today immoral, though some were admittedly wholesome and helpful.

Rev. John McElroy discussed the subject of "The Drama as a Social Force." He dealt upon the necessity and value of the drama as a recreation and an uplifting force; gave vivid descriptions of some of the presentations by Booth, Salvini, and Joseph Jefferson; and argued that the church should get closer to the player-folk and theatres as it was endeavoring to do in the Actors' Alliance.

R. H. Van Cleve, who discussed "The Modern Drama and Its Tendencies," endeavored to show that the mission of art is not to gratify our love for beauty or stimulate the intellect but to convey feeling and emotion; that dramatic art has fulfilled this mission better than any other; and that the trend of modern serious drama, as exemplified by those brought to the local playhouse, is in the main good and wholesome.

BEER SLEUTH IS TO GET NO PAY

COUNTY BOARD TURNS DOWN JASPER GRAFF'S BILL.

CHAIRMAN JONES IS ILL

Turned Gavel Over to Simon Smith of Deloit During Forenoon Session—Board Adjourns Tomorrow.

Chairman S. S. Jones of the county board was taken ill with the grippe while presiding over the session of the board this morning and had to turn the gavel over to Supervisor Simon Smith and reply to his queries at the hotel. He was up again and able to be about late this afternoon but did not return to the court house.

Mr. Graff's Bill Turned Down.
The County Fathers were so anxious to turn down the bill of $15.70 from Joseph N. Graff for detective services this afternoon that they said "no" by acclamation before the individual "aye" and "noes" were called, thus making the rejection doubly secure.

Supervisor L. E. Little explained the nature of the bill. He said: "It seems that they have a little pleasure resort up river where the members of the county board, I suppose, and others resort to on a Sunday. They sell beer there. The Temperance society or Anti Saloon league whatever it is, thought it incumbent upon itself to reform the morals of Janesville. So it sent a detective here and he called on District Attorney Fisher. The latter said that he would prosecute if any complaint came through the regular channels, but that he was not 'looking for trouble.' This fellow whose name sounds like Graff said that he'd take a hand in the matter himself if he could get witness fees. So he went up to the resort on Sunday and bought two bottles of beer. Thereafter he preferred charges. But the accused (Paul Gehrke) pleaded guilty, so there were no witness fees to be paid for Mr. Graff. It then occurred to him that the county owed him something for detective services and so he has filed this bill. He has no standing whatsoever before this board."

Other Claim Allowed.
The other claim which was questioned—the bill of the Park hotel for the board of witnesses, during the Jagan trial—was allowed after some debate, only Supervisor W. T. Sherman noting "no." All admitted that the bill was just and the services rendered, necessary, but the stumbling block was the fact that there was no order of the court and the board didn't like to create a precedent.

School District Discussion.
There was some debate this morning on the question as to whether the whole board ought to vote on the question of advancing money to the two school superintendent districts. It was decided that the representatives of the two districts should first vote separately on these appropriations and then the whole board should vote to pay them out of the general fund until the money should be raised by taxes and refunded. Each superintendent was given $250.

STATE CHARITIES ARE TO BE PROBED

INQUIRY ORDERED BY LEGISLATURE OF ILLINOIS.

RESULT OF GIROUX CASE

All the Institutions Will Be Investigated—Action Given Excuse for Further Delay on Primary Question.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 15.—A general inquiry into the conduct of all state charitable institutions was ordered by the legislature when that body reconvened Tuesday after a recess taken November 27.

Spirited discussion came with the offering of a resolution by Edward Hope of Chicago calling for the appointment of a committee of five by Speaker Shurtliff to conduct the probe. The resolution was adopted by a viva voce vote.

The move grows out of the accident to Frank Giroux, son of Benjamin Giroux of Chicago, who was burned recently at the home for Poble Minded at Lincoln, Ill. The document calls for a general probe of all the state institutions.

Set Back Action on Primaries.
The adoption of the resolution means that another recess of the legislature probably will be taken in order to give the investigators time in which to make the investigation requested. This probe will give excuse for further delay in the final disposition of the primary question.

Representative Oliver Sollitt of Chicago questioned the wisdom of the legislature in taking this action, saying the house has a standing committee to visit state charitable institutions.

"I see no reason for usurping this power and taking up the time of the legislature with a special committee," said Mr. Sollitt.

Bartonville Case Is Instant.
Representative Walter A. Latta took the other side of the proposition, declaring it was outside the province of a standing committee to deal with the subjects contained in the resolution. He asserted that only Monday a woman was burned in one of the tuberculosis tents at Bartonville.

The first whereof of the document states that "an inmate of one of our state institutions has lately met with a terrible injury in some manner at present not satisfactorily explained, and which from the character and objects of the institutions we believe should be impossible."

The resolution states that the committee shall thoroughly investigate the causes of and "the responsibility for the said injury as well as of and for such cases brought before it indicating injury to or improper, negligent or incompetent treatment of the inmates of our state institutions."

NOBILITY COME TO WEDDING

FRIENDS OF COUNT SZECZENYI ARRIVE IN NEW YORK.

Declare Gladys Vanderbilt, as Countess, Will Be Given Warm Welcome in Hungary.

New York, Jan. 15.—A party of friends of the Austrian bridegroom and who will be guests at the approaching wedding of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt and Count Laszlo Szechenyi, arrived Tuesday on the steamer Kronprinzessin Cecilie.

They are Count. Denes Szechenyi, the bridegroom's oldest brother, who is secretary of the Hungarian embassy at Berlin; the latter's wife, Countess Szechenyi, formerly Princess Caramen Chiny of Belgium; Count Stefan Szechenyi, Count Anton Sigray, who, it is reported, will act as the count's best man; Count Paul Esterhazy, an old companion of Laszlo, and Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy of the American embassy at Vienna.

As the party left the big liner they were met by Count Laszlo and there was a joyous reunion at the dock, after which the party was loaded into a great red touring car and whisked up town.

The foreigners were garbed for winter weather. Count Denes Szechenyi remarking that the severity of the weather in Budapest had exacted from many weeks ago. Countess Szechenyi, the only woman representative of the nobility of Hungary at the coming nuptials, wore a long gray seal coat with silver gray fox cape. She seemed to enjoy the questions of the reporters immensely. Mrs. O'Shaughnessy is a daughter of Dr. Elliot Cowen of Baltimore. She has been an intimate friend of the Szechenyi family for years and declared with emphasis that Gladys Vanderbilt would receive a welcome from the nobility of Hungary equal to that bestowed on a princess of the royal blood.

"The wedding presents are beautiful," she said. "Count Laszlo's brothers were not inclined to make a big splash by bringing a lot of gifts over here and very wisely, I believe, left them home, where they will await the count and now Countess. I have known Count Laszlo for years. He is a splendid young nobleman, rich, honest and loved by his people. Gladys Vanderbilt as Countess Szechenyi will have the social recognition accorded the royal house of Hungary."

When a question about a possible marriage settlement was asked Count Denes broke in with: "Well, you can say for Count Laszlo's big brother that there is no such a thing as a settlement. They will soon go to Hungary and the welcome accorded Count Laszlo and Countess Gladys will be heard around the world. Then you will know the sentiments of the Hungarian nobility."

AN SCROFULA INHERITANCE OF DISEASE AND SUFFERING

No truth is more forcibly manifested in physical life than the old saying "like begets like" for just as the offspring of healthy ancestry are blessed with pure, rich blood, insuring health and strength, so the children of blood tainted parentage inherit a polluted circulation to burden their existence with disease and suffering. Swollen glands about the neck, brittle bones, weak eyes, pale, waxy complexions, running sores and ulcers and general poor health, are the usual ways in which Scrofula is manifested. In some cases the blood is so filled with the scrofulous germs and tubercular matter that from birth life is made miserable with suffering. Others who inherit the disease succeed in holding the trouble in check during young, vigorous life, but when the system has begun to weaken and lose its natural vitality, and especially after a spell of sickness, the ravages of the disease will commence, and in a great many cases terminate in Consumption. S. S. S. is the very best treatment for Scrofula. It renovates the entire circulation and drives out the scrofulous and tubercular deposits. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and it not only goes to the very bottom of the trouble and removes the cause and cures the disease, but it supplies the weak, anemic blood with the healthful properties it is in need of. S. S. S. is made entirely of healing, cleansing roots, herbs and barks, and is an absolutely safe remedy for young or old. Look on the blood and any medical advice about Scrofula given free of charge.

Conventional and Natural. Many people are puzzled by the terms conventional and natural designs. The former means a design which does not profess to copy nature, and only by device or form suggest the flower, leaf or fruit found in the pattern. It may be worked in any colors. A natural design endeavors to follow the coloring of the natural leaves, blossoms and stems in pictures.

His low running laughter accompanying her voice had stimulated her to a gay audacity which for the instant extinguished in her the little fear of him she had been barely conscious of. "You know," he said, "that you also aroused me from my own dream."

"Did I? And can't you remember them?"

"You save me the necessity."

"Oh, that is a second-hand compliment," she said disdainfully. "A weak plagiarism on what I conveyed very wittily. You were probably really asleep and dreaming of bird murder."

He waited for her to finish, then, amused eyes searching, he roamed about until high on a little drifted sand dune he found a place for himself, and while she watched him indignantly he curled up in the sunbath and, dropping his head on the hot sand, calmly closed his eyes.

"Upon my word," she breathed aloud, "he nuzzled his eyes. 'Now you may dream; you can't avoid it,' he observed."

lazily and closed his eyes, and neither taunts nor jokes nor questions nor fragments of shell thing with intent to hit stirred him from his immobility.

She tried of the attempt presently and sat silent, elbows on her thighs, hands propping her chin. Thoughts vague as the fitful breeze arose, lingered and, like the breeze, faded, dissolved into calm, through which, evidenced by the far beat of the ebb tide, her heart echoed, beating the steady intervals of time. A long while afterward a small cloud floated across the sun, and in the sudden shadow on the world doubt sounded its tiny voice, and her ears listened, and the enchantment faded and died away.

Turning, she looked across the sand at the man lying there. Her eyes considered him—how long she did not know, she did not heed—until, stirring, he looked up, and she paled a trifle and closed her eyes, stunned by the sudden clamor of pulse and heart.

When he rose and walked over she looked up gravely, pouring the last handful of white sand through her stretched fingers.

"Did you dream?" he asked lightly.

"Yes."

"Did you dream true?"

"Nothing of my dream can happen," she said. "You know that, don't you?"

"I know that we love and that we dare not ignore it."

She suffered his arm about her, his eyes looking deeply into hers; a close, sweet caress, a union of lips and her dimmed eyes' response.

"Stephen," she faltered, "how can you make it so hard for me? How can you force me to this shame?"

"Shame?" he repeated vaguely.

"Yes; this treachery to myself when I cannot hope to be more to you, when I dare not love you too much!"

"No, no, but I know myself, I tell you! I cannot give up what is offered—for you—clearly, dearly as I do love you!" She turned and caught his hands in hers, flushed, trembling, un-strung. "I cannot—I simply cannot! How can you love me and listen to such wickedness? How can you still care for such a girl as I am—worse than necessary because I have a heart—or had until you took it? Keep it. It is the only part of me not all ignominious."

"I will keep it—in trust," he said. "Until you give yourself with it."

But she only shook her head wearily, withdrawing her hands from his, and for a time they sat silent, eyes apart.

Then—"There is another reason," she said wistfully.

He looked at her, hesitated, and—"My habits?" he asked simply.

"Yes."

"I have them in check."

"Are you certain?"

"I think I may be now."

"Yet," she said timidly, "you lost one fight—since you know me."

"The dull red mauling his face wrong her heart. She turned impulsively and laid both hands on his shoulders.

"That chance I would take, with all its uncertainty, all the dread inheritance you have come into. I love you enough for that. And if it turned out that—that you could not stem the tide even with me to face it with you, and if the pity of it, the grief of it, killed me I would take that chance if you loved me through it all. But there is something else. Hush! Let me have my say while I find the words—something also you do not understand. Turn your face a little. Please don't look at me. This is what you do not know—that in three generations every woman of my race has—gone wrong! Every one! And I am beginning with such a marriage, deliberately, selfishly, shamelessly, perfectly conscious of the frivolous, erratic blood in me, aware of the race record behind me!"

"Once when I knew nothing—before I met you—I believed such a marriage would not only permit me mental tranquility, but safely anchor me in the harbor of convention, leaving me free to become what I am fashioned to become—autocrat and arbiter in my own world. And now! And now! I don't know—truly I don't know what I may become. Your love forces my hand. I am displaying all the shyness, falterings, pettiness, all the mean and cruel and callous character which must be truly my real self. Only I shall not marry you! You are not to run the risk of what I might prove to be when I remember in bitterness all I have renounced. If I married you, I should remember, unconsoled, what you cost me. Better for you and for me that I marry him and let him bear with me when I remember that he cost me you!"

Suddenly deep within him something seemed to fail, die out, perhaps a tiny newly lighted flame of unaccustomed purity, the dawning flicker of aspiration to better things. Whatever it was, material, spiritual, was gone now, and where it had glimmered for a night the old accustomed twilight doubt crept in—the same dull acquiescence, the same uncertainty of self, the familiar lack of will, of incentive, the congenial tendency to drift, and with it came weariness, perhaps reaction from the recent skirmishes with that master vice.

"I suppose," he said in a dull voice, "you are right."

"No; I am wrong—wrong!" she said, lifting her lovely face and heavy eyes. "But I have chosen my path. And you will forget."

"I hope so," he said simply. "If you hope so, you will."

CHAPTER SEVEN

THE days of the house party at Shotover were numbered. A fresh relay of guests was to replace them on Monday, and so they were making the most of the waning week on lawn and marsh, in covert and blind, or motorizing madly over the state or riding in parties to Vernon Light. Tennis, and lawn bowls came into fashion. Even water polo and squash alternated on days too raw for more rugged sport.

And during all these days Beverly Plank appeared with unflagging persistence and assiduity, until his familiar, big, round head and patient, doll-like, Dutch eyes became a matter of course at Shotover, indoors and out.

The accomplished establishment of Beverly Plank was probably due as much to his own obstinate and good tempered persistence as to Mrs. Mortimer. He was a Harvard graduate—there are all kinds of them—enormously wealthy, and, though he had no particular personal tastes to gratify, he was willing and able to gratify the tastes of others. He did whatever anybody else did and did it well enough to be amusing, and as lack of intellectual development never barred anybody from any section of the fashionable world, it seemed fair to infer that he would land where he wanted to sooner or later.

Meanwhile Mrs. Mortimer led him about with the confidence that was her prerogative, and the chances were that in due time he would have house parties of his own at Black Falls—not the kind he had wisely denied himself the pleasure of giving, with such neighbors as the Ferralls to observe, but the sort he desired. However, there were many things to be accomplished for him and by him before he could expect to use his great yacht and his estates and his shooting boxes and the vast granite mansion recently completed and facing Central park just north of the new palaces built on the edges of the outer desert where Fifth avenue fringes the Hudson.

Meanwhile he had become in a measure domesticated at Shotover, and Shotover people gradually came to ride, drive and motor over the Falls, which was a good beginning, though not necessarily a promise for anything definite in the future.

Mortimer, riding a huge chestnut— he could still wedge himself into a saddle—had now made it a regular practice to affect the jocular early bird squire and drag Plank out of bed.

Plank's negligence among people who knew Mortimer being limited, he had no means of determining the latter's social value except through hearsay and a tawdry newspaper or two. Therefore he was not yet aware of Mortimer's perennial need of money, and when Mortimer laughingly alluded to his poverty Plank accepted the proposition in a purely comparative sense and laughed, too, his thrifty Dutch soul untroubled by misgivings.

Meanwhile "Mortimer" had come, among other things, on information; how much, and precisely of what nature, he was almost too much ashamed to admit definitely, even to himself.

There was much about Plank that was unaffected, genuine, even simple, in one sense. He cared for people for their own sakes, and only stubborn adherence to a dogged ambition had enabled him to dispense with the society of many people he might easily have cultivated and liked—people nearer his own sort, and that, perhaps, was the reason he so readily liked Mortimer, whose coarse fiber soon wore through the polish when rubbed against by a closer, finer fiber. And Plank liked him aside from gratitude, and they got on famously on the basis of such mutual recognition. Then, one day, very suddenly, Mortimer stumbled on something valuable—a thread, a mere clue, so astonishing that for an instant it absolutely upset all his unadmitted theories and calculations.

It was nothing—a vague word or two—a forced laugh—and the scared silence of this man Plank, who had blundered on the verge of a confidence to a man he liked.

A moment of amazement, or half incredulous suspicion, of certainty, and Mortimer pounced playfully upon him like a tiger—a big, fat, friendly, jocular tiger.

"Plank, is that what you're up to?"

"Up to? Why, I never thought of such a thing."

"Taw, haw!" roared Mortimer. "If you could only see your face!"

And Beverly Plank, red as a beet, comfortably sufficed with reassurance under the reaction from his scare, attempted to refute the other's conclusions: "It doesn't mean anything, Mortimer. She's just the handsomest girl I ever saw. I know she's engaged. I only admired her a lot."

"You're not the only man," said Mortimer blandly, still striving to reconcile his preconceived theories with the awkward half confession of this great, red faced, hulking horseman riding at his stirrup.

"For wouldn't have her dream," stammered Plank, "that I had ever thought of such a thing."

"Why not? It would only flatter her."

"Flatter a woman who is engaged to marry another man?" gasped Plank.

"Certainly. Do you think any woman ever had enough admiration in this world?" asked Mortimer coolly. "And as for Sylvia Landis, she'd be tickled to death if anybody flattered that you had ever admired her."

Construction of Manholes.

In a certain technical college when the question, "Why are manholes made elliptical and not circular?" was put to the class in examination the majority answered by describing "the shape of a man's head or body, or in some other manner going into the details of the human anatomy." The others answered that the reason for making them elliptical is that the covers may be placed on the inside, an operation which would be impossible with a circular manhole.

A Permanent Position.

There was not even standing room in the six o'clock crowded car, but one more passenger, a young woman, wedged her way along just inside the doorway. Each time the car took a sudden lurch forward she fell helplessly back, and three times she landed in the arms of a large, comfortable man on the back platform. The third time it happened he said quietly: "Hain't you better stay here?"

American Woman in German Eyes.

American girls, whether born or merely brought up in America, evidence the same independence of judgment and the same complete self-reliance. It is hard to say whether this is the result of the education in the public schools and colleges or in their freedom from that condition of legal and social subservience to which the gentler sex is doomed in older countries.—Max von Brandt in Berlin Deutsche Revue.

The British Breed.

British-bred animals, whether they be horses, cattle, sheep, or even pigs, are superior to all others in quality and stamina. There is some strange and admirable power in our soil and climate which puts a stronger fiber and a more enduring stamp of excellence into the live stock bred in our islands than are found in the same breed or species in any other part of the world.—London Times.

Houses and Homes.

There have been, and there are today in the various lands of the earth, many people who have no homes, and nothing that you could call furniture, even of the antique variety. But there can be no doubt that they are far happier than many who are comfortably housed in mansions which contain everything that money can buy.—Uncle Remus Magazine.

Rear Admiral William H. Emory.

Rear Admiral Emory, in command of the second division of the battle fleet on its cruise to the Pacific, is equally as picturesque as his superior, "Fighting Bob." On one occasion when he was a Lieutenant, he had to reprimand an enlisted man of great physical strength and reputation as a bully. Afterward this man went among his men declaring that the Lieutenant would not have dared to be so severe if he had not had on his uniform for protection. Changing to hear this remark, Emory applied for shore leave, donned civilian clothes, followed the bully off the ship into a side street and licked him good and plenty.

The admiral is known throughout the service as "Prince Bill," a nickname he got in the days when he was much of a society man and took delight in fine raiment. Even now he dresses in extreme fashion when on shore. On deck he is the spick and span man of the fleet.

ENTIRE CITY INTERESTED IN YOUNG MAN

Cooper's New Theory Attracts Widespread Attention During Stay in Cincinnati.

An adequate idea of the intense interest which has been aroused by young Mr. Cooper during the past year with his theories and medicines is given in the following article which appeared in the Cincinnati Post while Cooper was introducing his ideas to the people of that city. The article says: "The beginning of Mr. Cooper's second week in Cincinnati gives every indication that he is to enjoy the same astonishing success here as in other cities."

"From the first day of his visit the crowds that call to see him have steadily increased, until now it has reached a point where several thousand walk with him each day. The entire city seems to have become interested in his theory that the human stomach is degenerate, and he already has an army of followers in Cincinnati who seem positive that his claims are correct."

"A number of Cincinnatians were interviewed at Cooper's headquarters on Friday, and several interesting statements, showing their intense faith in Cooper's preparations, were secured. The following are selected from these statements and are characteristic of them all: Mrs. M. E. Emerson of 530 West Court street, said: 'I have suffered with stomach trouble and indigestion for a year or so. When I ate I would have bloated myself, sour stomach, fermentation, bad taste in my mouth. In the morning I was as tired as when I went to bed. I had a dull pain in the lower part of my back. I have taken almost one bottle of the New Discovery and am so wonderfully improved that I have come down here to thank Mr. Cooper in person and obtain more of the medicine.'

"Another individual interviewed was Mr. J. H. Brooks, living at 527 Walnut street, who had the following to say: 'For the past eighteen months I have been a constant sufferer from catarrh of the head and stomach. My nasal passages would become inflamed and I would have severe headaches, which affected my eyes, and great cramps of matter would drop into the throat, causing an irritation of the bronchial passages, until the stomach finally became poisoned. When I would lay down at night a phlegm would gather in my throat until it almost choked me, and would cause an annoying cough. Half a bottle of Cooper's New Discovery gave me relief, and when the first bottle was finished I felt like a new man. I am now completely cured and consider Cooper's New Discovery the greatest catarrh, blood and stomach remedy in the world.'

The Cooper preparations have been wonderfully successful throughout the United States. We consider them remarkable medicines and would be pleased to explain the nature of them.

East Side Fights for Lower Rents

NEW YORK.—Victory is dawning for the thousands of tenants of the lower east side who are fighting for lower rents. Many landlords have announced that they were ready to make reductions. Some of the landlords are offering compromise propositions, but in the main the tenants are holding out for a material reduction.

Rents in the tenement houses, it is said, have almost doubled within the last three years, and have advanced 20 per cent within a year. To make the matter worse, the heads of thousands of families are out of work.

The opening gun in the remarkable industrial struggle was fired by the 48 families in the double-decker tenement, 68 and 70 Stanton street, who asked for a reduction of $1 a month, and by the 82 families in 216 and 218 Cherry street, who demanded $3 a month for the monthly rental of $21 to $25 for the front flats of four and five rooms, and $2 from the $18 rate for the rear rooms.

The action was followed immediately by the immense tenement population on Allen street north of Grand, Rutgers, Essex, Ludlow, Hester, Monroe and Jefferson streets—the most densely populated section of any city in the world. Seventeen languages or dialects are spoken within this area, and the proselyters were selected with especial reference to their ability to impress upon tenants in their native tongues the necessity of standing by their pledges.

Where a landlord succeeded in evicting one family the other families were pledged to take the dispossessed household into their own flats and care for them as boarders until the landlord saw the futility of such a losing game and surrendered. All the east side was being flooded with placards preaching war on the demands of the landlords.

The real leader in the struggle which has a following of 30,000 is a frail factory girl. Her name is Pauline Newman. This child of the Ghetto is not a frenzied, evil-tongued girl, who wildly preaches revolt, but is a quiet, determined, highly intelligent leader of a well-organized, enthusiastic band. She works daily in a shirtwaist factory. Well educated for one in her station of life, deeply thoughtful, and fully cognizant of the horrors of poverty, she is eminently fitted to direct the east side tenement dwellers in their fight for reduced rents.

Ex-Hermit's Alluring Financial Club

Any one with a liking for club life and at the same time a hankering to get rich quicker than the savings banks will let him should hustle and join the very latest thing in Fifth avenue clubs before it is too late. Not only has this club got a Fifth avenue home but it has a founder and president, who says that he was unannounced to James G. Blaine for not less than forty years, and, therefore, ought to know something about stocks.

"Hogch's Ten Dollar Club" is the name of this latest idea in clubs. Henry N. Roach is the name of the founder. Besides being head of the club, Mr. Roach is a financial agent with an office on Fifth avenue where the club also is. From the club windows one may catch the glint of the jewels in Tiffany's, across the street, as an inducement to give Mr. Roach more money to invest.

Although Mr. Roach has been a Fifth avenue financial agent since April last only, he had been many things before that, including a Comstock ulnor, unannounced to James G. Blaine, government employe, and last, but not least, a hermit.

As a hermit he was discovered a year and a half ago by the newspapers out at Winamac, Ind., where he was described as living in a log cabin with a box containing the story of his life and facts about Washington society that would tear up the capital. In these dispatches it was stated that he had been private secretary to Blaine for eight years. Later in a note to the Washington newspapers Mr. Roach denied the whole thing, even to the fact that he had been Mr. Blaine's secretary, but now he says he was. Just how the transformation from a hermit in Indiana to a financial agent on Fifth avenue was brought about Mr. Roach may later inform the club which is just forming.

In some of the recent numbers of Mr. Roach's weekly paper, Roach's Financial Facts, Mr. Roach makes it clear that one has to do to join the club is to sign an agreement to hand over to Mr. Blaine's former secretary $10 a month for ten months.

The "Ten Dollar Club," Mr. Roach announces, is to be limited to 1,000 memberships, but a man who would like to get rich quicker can take out any number of memberships. Mr. Roach is one of the many friends of the small investor that have sprung up recently and is going to give the club all the benefit of his financial acumen and experience in trying to make them get rich quick. Just how he is going to do this Mr. Roach explains in Financial Facts.

Gotham Now a Wilderness of Signs

The Civic and Art Association is banding together to check at least any further encroachments of the sign and billboard nuisance. It has begun its work by obtaining an injunction against the Fifth avenue benzine business to remove the yellow signs from the tops of the stage coaches. The association believes the only way to check the sign evil is through taxation. With this end in view it purposed to have a bill passed when the legislature meets next year.

To get away from the glare of the billboards is no easy task in New York today. They line every railroad track entering the city, the harbor front and the rivers. Take a ride on the elevated and signs from the house-tops stare one in the face. Drop into the subway, and incandescent lamps make a blinding light for them. The visitor when taken for a ride along river-side drive is confronted by colossal signs on the Jersey shore, and when he leaves Manhattan his last view of the city is a wonderful skyline marred by billboards flaunted from the tops of the highest towers.

To the occupant of the flat, hotel or apartment house there is no rest from the constant stare of these hideous signs. They are often the last things seen when the curtains are drawn at night and the first to appear when the morning dawns, many of them burning a steady glare to the last hour of darkness. In the innermost fastnesses of the parks about the only place one may escape them, and it is due solely to the vigilance of individuals that signboards have not invaded even those bowers of nature.

New Hudson Terminal Is a Wonder

When the mammoth Hudson terminal is ready for use next spring, New York will possess what is at once the most gigantic structure of its kind and by far the largest office building in the world. The grand center or terminal of all the city's subway, face transportation lines and tunnels, connecting by them with every rail road entering the city, it will cover two blocks, with four stories below the street level and 21 above. Besides its terminal facilities it will have in its 27 acres of floor space more than 4,000 offices and will accommodate more than 10,000 workers.

The 18,000,000 cubic foot of this enormous structure makes it two and a half times as large as the largest existing office building, the Broad Exchange, which has only 7,000,000 cubic feet. Into the construction of the terminal will enter 113 miles of electrical wiring, 16 miles of plumbing pipe, 20 miles of steam pipe, 95 miles of conduits, 1,300,000 feet of the partitions, 5,200 doors, 5,000 windows, 120,000 square feet of glass, 56 miles of wood base, 65 miles of picture molding and 30,000 electric lights.

For the construction of the building above the street level alone 16,300,000 bricks are necessary, which, if laid end to end, would stretch across the continent 2,000 miles, or from New York to Denver. More than 75,000,000 pounds of concrete will be used in the completed building, or enough to pave Broadway one foot thick from curb to curb from the Battery to Forty-second street. Of structural steel 24,000 tons will be used and the whole mass when completed will have an estimated load and live load of 200,000 tons.

FORAKER AND DICK BUSY

FOUR OHIO POSTMASTERSHIP NOMINATIONS DEFEATED.

Rejected by Senate, and the Senior Buckeye Senator Takes Slap at the President.

Washington, Jan. 15.—During the executive session of the senate Tuesday, held for the purpose of confirming presidential appointments, the nominations of four Ohio postmasters were defeated at the instance of Senators Foraker and Dick.

The four rejected were Emil H. Masses, Wapakoneta; David C. Mahon, Denison; John F. Wetherill, Spencer; and George W. White, Uhrichsville. The nominations were reported unfavorably by the post office committee. Senator Dick, of Ohio made the report from that committee, and on motion of Senator Foraker, the senate immediately took action by sustaining the committee report.

There was no vote, the names being acted upon in the usual manner by the vice president putting the question and assuming silence as an affirmative. Senator Foraker, however, broke the silence after the names were rejected by moving that the president be immediately notified of the senate's action. His ally caused considerable merriment.

In commenting upon the senate's action, Senator Foraker said later: "There will be no further prostration of federal patronage in order to carry out political bargains without its being resented. There will be other objections to nominations wherever it is found that the appointments were made in pursuance of a political compact."

SMALL BRAWL AT RIO.

Americans in Slight Trouble—Large Party Goes Ashore.

Rio Janeiro, Jan. 15.—There was a little brawl between some of the American sailors from the fleet and Brazilian and Portuguese boatmen at the landing dock at midnight Monday night. Exaggerated reports of the affair were abroad, but when questioned regarding it Admiral Evans said:

"The occurrence was only an ordinary drunken brawl which was quickly stopped by local police and the officers from the ships. All were suspended from shore leave. The matter was not serious. The granting of shore leave was resumed Tuesday, when 4,000 men, double the number of Monday, were permitted to go ashore. The local authorities consented to this large shore party. The men have been cordially received in Rio Janeiro."

Mississippi Late in Freezing.
Winona, Minn., Jan. 15.—The Mississippi river at this point, froze over Tuesday, the latest in history. A few days ago the launch Virginia made a trip to Fountain City, Wis., and returned ten miles up the river, a feat never known to have been accomplished in the month of January by a motor-propelled craft.

Planter Killed in Duel.
Rosemark, Tenn., Jan. 15.—G. Washington Smith, a prominent planter, was shot and killed here Tuesday in a pistol duel with M. W. Yarbrough. The latter was a tenant of Smith and the men were en route to Memphis to submit a money difference to arbitration. Yarbrough escaped.

Guilty of Embezzlement.
St. Louis, Jan. 15.—Benjamin Emmons, former clerk in the post office at St. Charles, Mo., was adjudged guilty of having embezzled $988.01 in office funds by a jury in the United States district court Tuesday.

Loss at El Oro Only $50,000.
Mexico City, Jan. 15.—The fire that destroyed some buildings in the town of El Oro did not attain the proportions that it was thought it had at the outset. The loss is estimated at about $50,000.

Fire Chief Harding of Jackson, O., was run over and killed while answering a fire call.

Eight hundred unemployed men marched to the city hall in St. Louis and asked Mayor Wells for work.

Two members of the Japanese cabinet resigned, and the resignation of all was narrowly averted, the trouble being over the budget.

Vandals have stolen and ruined $25,000 worth of pictures, furniture and bric-a-brac in the home of F. P. Earle in New York. Mr. Earle is in Italy.

Misses Annie and Maggie Wade, sisters, of Oak Park, Ill., went insane at Ocean park, near Los Angeles, Cal., as a result of the financial depression.

The supreme court of Ohio sentenced former Supreme Court Clerk Lawson W. Knudson to ten days in jail and State Senator Austin of Toledo to ten days in jail and $100 fine in connection with the charge of securing the latter's certificate to practice law without proper examination.

Rich Man's Son a Burglar.
Joplin, Mo., Jan. 15.—Walter Harrington, son of Charles O. Harrington, former mayor of Carthage, and one of the wealthiest men in Jasper county, was fined $250 and costs and sentenced to four months' imprisonment by Judge Smith McPherson in the federal court here Tuesday. Harrington had pleaded guilty to the charge of robbing numerous depot express offices. The jail sentence was remitted.

Could Make Allowances.

The young mother, who was trying to put the baby to sleep, had darkened the room. Somebody tried to enter the side door, and she went and opened it. "I beg your pardon," said the elderly matron who had come up on the porch, "but is this house for rent?"

"Not at all."

"Seeing the blinds down, I thought there was nobody living here, and as I am looking for a house I was going to step in and inspect it."

"Well, it's not empty, and it's not for rent, ma'am. The reason why the blinds are down, if you must know—"

"Oh, I see. The lace curtains are in the wash. Well, we all have to clean house once in awhile. Sorry to have troubled you. Good day."—Chicago Tribune.

The Utility of the Ox.

I should think the ox is the most useful—postmortem—of all animals. We eat its flesh. We make manure of its blood. We use its horns for lanterns and combs. Buttons and glue come from its hoofs. Its bones become margarine or manure. In the knife handle we use it in leather. In gold beads's skin, felt roofing; every part of its internal economy is part of our external economy, and its fat is incandescent (or not) as tallow.—Dry's Magazine.

The Art of Indexing.
A Natal public library catalogue contains entries as follows:

Lead, Kindly Light.

Poisoning.

Almost as funny as the catalogue which gave:

Milk—On the Human Understanding.

On the Floor.

—Publisher and Register.

His Counting Habit.

"Your husband says that when he is angry he always counts ten before he speaks," said one woman.

"Yes," answered the other, "which he'd stop it. Since he got dyspepsia home seems nothing but a class in arithmetic."—London Mail.

ANOTHER JANUARY THAW.

In "Dear Old Lullaby."

Inopportune.
"What's the matter, old chap?" "Just been round to the pawnbroker's to pop an umbrella and met Smith there." "Well, what about it?" "Nothing—only the umbrella was Smith's!"—Illustrated Hits.

The Starfish Analyzed.
The starfish, one of the lowest forms of life, has on its back about 25,000 jaws or hands arranged in rings and bands. By the aid of these it captures many animals for food, even quick, active fish of considerable size. Prof. Jennings of Johns Hopkins has photographed the starfish at dinner, and has discovered that even this low form of animal life has "habits."

Plants That Are Poisonous.
Many harmless plants contain poison. Daffodil and narcissus pickers are troubled with a skin disease known as "daffodil poisoning." Gatherings form under the "fingernails." They are caused by minute crystals in the juice of the stems. The bulbs of the white Roman hyacinth have similar unpleasant properties.

Lots Now Getting Scarce.
